

Dear Mayor Bloomberg:

Despite gains in traffic safety over the past ten years, New York City's automobile traffic remains the number one cause of injury-related death for children under 14. Traffic fatality reductions have stagnated, and a new approach is needed to solve the problem of dangerous driving. Please create an Office of Road Safety to oversee traffic safety in New York City. Just as you improved New Yorkers' smoking habits, you can deter the dangerous behaviors and hazardous effects of New Yorkers driving habits. To create new gains in traffic crash and fatality reduction, we need interagency coordination. Mayor Bloomberg, create an Office of Road Safety which can recognize, analyze and develop a response to the problem of our dangerous streets.

Sincerely,

Dear Speaker Quinn:

Thank you for your continued support of Intro. 871, The Bicycle Access Bill. Under your leadership, the Council is poised to pass this truly historic piece of legislation this summer. As a proud voting New Yorker, I believe legislation which supports the environment, green transportation, healthy workers and free daily commuting is a critical step to making New York City sustainable.

Sincerely,
